OMAHA WHOLE GRAIN BAKERY SELECTED AS ‘FOOD DONOR OF THE YEAR’

Omaha, Neb., April 1, 2009 – The Great Harvest Bread Co. bakery in Omaha was recently selected as the ‘Food Donor Company of the Year,’ an honor bestowed by the Omaha Food Bank to area organizations and businesses that help to keep their food supplies maintained.

Great Harvest Bread Co. is owned by Omaha residents Dennis and Marian Cihacek and has three locations: 10916 Elm St. in Rockbrook Village; 4910 Underwood Ave. in Dundee; and 15623 West Dodge Rd. in West Omaha.

“Great Harvest has donated bread to The Omaha Food Bank for distribution on a regular basis,” says a representative of The Omaha Food Bank. “For several years, Great Harvest Bread has helped The Omaha Food Bank honor and celebrate the hard work of its pantries by providing various breads for the annual Hunger Awareness Community Dinner.”

The Omaha Food Bank is a non-profit organization whose mission is to alleviate hunger through the collection of donated food and household products and the distribution of these items to charities and organizations that help people in need. The Food Bank works with over 60 organizations in eastern Nebraska and western Iowa to combat the issue of hunger.

Great Harvest purchases its premium whole grain wheat from family-owned farms in Montana. Wheat from this region tastes rich and has excellent baking properties. The whole grains are milled daily in the bakery to ensure the taste, moisture content and nutrients are outstanding. Great Harvest is known for its scratch-made whole grain breads, especially its signature Honey Whole Wheat made with real honey and just pure-and-simple ingredients. The bakery also offers fresh scones, cookies, kolaches, and cinnamon rolls, and seasonal treats.
